

Johnson Says He is Not a Good-up Man-Howling and Football

Walter Johnson Says He Is Not Attempting To Hold Up Washington Club for Big Pay

By WILLIAM PERRY.

One of Walter Johnson's Washington friends received yesterday a long letter from the great pitcher, in which Johnson said that he was not attempting to hold up the local club for an unreasonable salary, and that he expected to pitch for the Nationals next year.

According to Johnson, the big pitcher has in his possession at present two offers from Federal League clubs, and has sent word to the Nationals club owners that he will consider all proposals that are as far as he has gone.

In another portion of Johnson's missive he remarks that he is perfectly satisfied with the treatment accorded him by the Nationals, and does not intend to play with any other team than Washington.

Officials of the local club are inclined to take a different view of the situation, but are talking very little about the matter these days.

Twelve football players have been killed during the season, about to close. A study of the list indicates that the well-trained college football player is not so often fatally injured. Of the twelve who have been killed only two were college men, according to the report just published. Most of the fatalities have been schoolboys, who in most cases have been improperly trained or who were physically unfit for the most strenuous of pastimes. There is no denying that the American style of play demands the most rugged constitution. It is folly for a weak lad to go into such a branch of athletics, where his chances of serious injury are so great, comparatively.

The receipts at the Yale-Harvard football game were $127,000, according to an announcement made in New Haven. This is the largest amount ever realized by any single athletic contest in this country.

with the sole exception of the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno, when $70,000 poured into the coffers of the promoters. The drains on the small fortune collected in the bowl will be many. In the first place an army of 1,400 men was required to handle the immense throng that witnessed the gridiron battle. The expenses of the team, with its highly paid coaches and trainers, also must of necessity be heavy.

Football has ever been the most profitable of the college sports, and the many athletic teams look forward each year to a share in the surplus which football invariably rolls up. So a goodly proportion of the $127,000 will be used to bolster up the finances of basketball, hockey, gymnastics, fencing, and the like.

Says Joe Vitz, of the New York Evening Sun: Harvard men owe their remarkable victory over Yale to the miracle man of the gridiron, Percy D. Haughton. It was Haughton's coaching methods that produced the wonderful Crimson eleven in the Yale Bowl on Saturday, a more powerful team than the great crowd of 70,000 spectators had been led to expect. Haughton undoubtedly fooled everybody, including the Yale coaches, when he purposely restrained the Crimson players in the Princeton game. He pointed his men for an overwhelming triumph at New Haven, and he carried out his plans to the letter.

Imagine, therefore, the shock to thousands of Yale supporters were subjected when they saw Frank Hinkley's eleven literally torn to pieces! Right up to the last moment critics and fans believed that the battle would be close with Harvard a probable winner by a small score. The fact that Harvard had beaten the Tigers 29 to 6, while Yale rolled up 19 points against the Jersey men, made it appear that the Bulldogs would not be disgraced by defeat. But within the first eight minutes of play Harvard's great team not only surprised the spectators, but also demoralized Hinkley's pupils, a brilliant run of fifty yards by Mahan paying the way for Yale's hard fall.

The Yale rush line, which worried Hinkley all season, was directly responsible for Harvard's unexpected totals. Hinkley's forwards displayed a lack of experience and physical strength. They were unable to afford either protection or interference for the Yale back field, which, of course, could not play the game unaided. Haughton's system of attack and defense, which had been brought up to the top notch of perfection, excelled the work of former Crimson eleven to such a degree that Yale was audibly outclassed. In short, Haughton may be called the Miracle Man of football, for as a coach he standing head and shoulders above the other instructors in gridiron strategy.

Dear Sir: In behalf of the National Athletic Club football team, which has been undefeated this season, I have been trying to arrange a game with Mr. Joseph Oliver, manager of the Vikings. For next Sunday or any day he may deem fit, giving day, Mr. Oliver permitted us this date for next Sunday, and you went so far as to announce in your column that the winner of the Midwestern National game would play his team for the championship of the District on November 22. Mr. Oliver will give us no reason for not playing us, all he will say is "positively no." How can he claim the championship if he has refused to play us? The District team that has defeated every one of their opponents? We have defeated the Spartans, Meridians, Company D, of Washington Barracks, Tacoma A. C., Fort Washington, and the post team of Fort Myer by the score of 12 to 0, and we defeated the post team of the same fort by the score of 19 to 0. Doesn't that entitle us to a game? We have never refused to play any team who have been playing football, meeting all claims and settling them all. If Manager Oliver is not afraid to play our team for the championship of the District, he can see us at my place of business at any time at all.

Thanking you for the valuable space he has used, I remain, yours in sport,

VITZ, GAUGER, Manager National A. C.

HERE ARE TWO COACHES AT EXTREMES OF SYSTEMS OF COLLEGE COACHING

—Photos by American Press Association.

FRANK H. HINKLEY.
George H. Brooke, coach of the football team of the University of Pennsylvania, and Frank H. Hinkley, who is coaching Yale, are seen here in a discussion of their methods and systems. Brooke is regarded as an "easy boss." He is mild and persuasive, always gentlemanly, and he is well liked. He knows his business, and knows it up and down. He is never satisfied with the work his players do. He "rides" them all the time, and if he has any friends they are not lost in expressing their friendship. The result is that Brooke is the best coach in the country. He is a team with this season, and Hinkley is sure of being retained.

Navy Holds Spirited Practice For Big Game

Final Preparations Begun by Driving Team Through Hard Signal Drill—Army Puts in Long Punting Practice.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 23.—Full of spirit and determination, the Navy football team today began final preparations for the big final game of the season with the rival West Point cadets at Philadelphia on Saturday. The players were out early, and while the practice was extensive, there was no scrimmage, the work consisting almost entirely of signal and formation drills, with much attention given to the plays designed especially for use against the army lads, and a bit of the rudimentary work on side.

There is a growing confidence among the navy contingent that the Middles will be able to pull off a victory. This is based not upon the season's record of the team, but mainly through the fact that the players have been developed gradually, and it is felt they will be in the pink of condition at the hour of the game.

The army cadets undoubtedly are strong. The Middles appreciate this, while the sailors' season has not been successful as that of their rivals. Navy people feel that the jinx which has become something of a tradition in football, will again be overturned, the same as it is in good condition physically, and the men went through their stiff drill without a hitch. The playing field was in better condition, but the surface was frozen so hard that the coaches did not dare risk a chance on injuries, and there was no scrimmaging.

The kickers got plenty to do, Hodgson and Ford being sent through a long punting drill with the ends and linemen going down under the kicks. Van Fleet's continued good work in the back field is making him a strong contender for the full back position, which has an alone been filled by the veteran, Benedict. The latter has been showing evidence of slowing up in his work of late and it is thought he may meet an even chance for the place. The selection of a team to meet the Navy will not be made until Thursday. Lieut. Dean, former Army star kicker and half back, was on the field watching the big team go through its paces.

Cornell.
Ithaca, Nov. 23.—Amidst a tremendous demonstration by 3,000 Cornell undergraduates the Cornell football team and sixteen subs left Ithaca tonight for Atlantic City, where the players will remain until the game with Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving Day. A big parade escorted the team from the campus to the station.

The coaches would make no predictions as to the outcome of the game, but a strong air of confidence runs through the Cornell camp. In addition to the varsity squad of twenty-seven men, four ex-players, who have been kept out of the game most of the season, also made the trip. Harry Taylor and Charlie Lahr, two regular varsity men, who broke their legs early in the season, and McElroy and Mueller, sub and guard, respectively, were also in the party.

Pennsylvania.
Philadelphia, Nov. 23.—Five thousand students of the University of Pennsylvania assembled on Franklin Field today and gave the varsity football team a great send-off on their departure for the White Marsh Valley Country Club, where the football players will train for the annual game with Cornell on Thanksgiving Day. Many changes in the personnel of the team were expected to result this week. It is almost assured that Merrill, who played quarter in the Michigan and Dartmouth games, will be replaced by Murdoch, while it is certain that a different line will face the Cornell team.

LUCK PLAYS BIG FACTOR IN Yale-Harvard Game

Big "Breaks" in Clash at New Bowl All Favor Harvard Eleven—Crimson Team Would Have Won Without the Luck.

New York, Nov. 23.—Post-mortem ceremonies conducted today over Yale-Harvard game Saturday bring to light the fact that Yale was beaten by the greatest football machine ever welded together in the East. Harvard possessed an irresistible attack and an impregnable defense. And that's the story.

Yale, of course, was out-lucked. Four times there were big "breaks" in the game, and four times the Crimson was plunged over the Harvard line. But the ball did not go with him. He had fumbled and Colledge, the Harvard end, picked up the ball on Harvard's 3-yard line and scored a touchdown for the Crimson.

That was luck of the purest kind. Just before Watson, the Crimson quarterback, did just what Watson did—he fumbled on the enemy's 3-yard line, just as his body shot over the enemy's goal line. Once again Harvard luck came to the fore, for the ball rolled back on the Yale line and Francke, the Harvard full back, grabbed it and it scored as a touchdown for Harvard.

Once Mahan's drop-kick attempt was blocked but Harvard recovered the kick. The next attempt at a goal from field went into Legore's hands, but he fumbled and the ball again went to Harvard. That was luck-and football, too. But mainly luck. And Harvard took advantage of the luck for on the next play Mahan succeeded where he had failed twice before—he kicked a field goal.

Morningstar Wins Match From Japanese Payer

Ora Morningstar won the first game in the Washington series of the Champion Billiard Players' League from Koli Yamada last night at the Royal Casino. The Japanese was a very good player and performed the task most satisfactorily.

The players were introduced by Burton Mark, manager of the Champion Billiard Players' League, who came from New York to witness this series. Mr. Mark explained the conditions under which the game was played and the importance of the match to the league.

For the past ten years a great rivalry has existed in billiards between Baltimore and the State of Maryland, and the District warrior who always puts over the long end of the score. In an effort to present an eleven from the Monumental City to compete with the crack Virginia team Manager Frankie Ruth, of the Walbrook Athletic Club, has gathered together some of the fastest players in the State and will come here next Sunday confident of winning.

"Dutch" Mellon, who for two seasons in a row was selected as the best back-player in the State of Maryland, has been secured to play full back, while Johnny Wilson will be seen in half back.

The rest of the team is made up of players from the Mount Washington and Garrison clubs and St. John's College team. The entire squad has been practicing for the past two weeks, and the team is coming here confident of landing the long end of the score.

Half Back Derby and Tackle Licorona are the only ones that came through Sunday's game with any injuries to amount to anything, but Coach Ray Brown has hopes of rounding them into condition in time for Sunday's contest.

WALBROOK ELEVEN TO PRESENT STRONG TEAM

Declines to Meet White.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Manager Harry Pollock, setting for light-weight champion Freddie Webb, today refused an offer to meet Charlie White over the twenty-round bout in San Francisco on December 12, the day on which boxing will be permitted in California. Pollock said the time was too short for preparation.

Yale May Play Dartmouth.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 23.—It was learned at the Yale football headquarters yesterday that the Bulldogs will offer a game on the 25th schedule to Dartmouth.

The proposed game is to be played in the new stadium at New Haven.

Yale has never met Dartmouth in football, and it is expected that the game would draw a dandy crowd, as the Bulldogs have a big following all through New England.

Dartmouth played Harvard until a few years ago, but the Crimson defeated them.
